MAKE THE SIDEWALKS SAFE

Several persons were injured last winter in Columbia from falls on icy sidewalks. The City Council has therefore passed an ordinance requiring owners of lots to have the snow and ice shoveled off the walks. This ordinance is all the more timely in view of the fact that some of the vocational students in the University have not entirely recovered from their wounds. An awkward slip might mean another trip to the hospital.

551 AMERICANS WERE KILLED—

Many well-meaning Americans, jealous of our national honor, will pounce on the statement that 551 Americans have been killed in Mexico since November 20, 1910, as justification for intervention, not reflecting that most of these homicides would have occurred even though Mexico had been on the most friendly terms with the United States.

It is difficult to credit the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico with a desire to help make truth prevail in its untimely publishing of such figures at this juncture of strained relations between Mexico and the United States. Too many persons will see only one fact—that 551 Americans have been killed by Mexicans; the statement should have been accompanied by an explanation of border conditions of life.

Northern Mexico, a potentially rich region of developing mines and ranches, is a frontier country; and frontier living conditions involve frequent killings. The first graveyards in the old West were filled mostly by men who died with their boots on.

The drinking and gambling attendant on the rush of miners and cattlemen into Mexico—men away from their mothers, wives and sisters, and tempted by the opportunities for smuggling, kidnapping and robbing in a shifting and inchoate society—all these factors will explain a large share of the 551 homicides. To blame the Mexican government for these deaths is as unfair as holding the United States government responsible for the large number of negroes killed by whites, not to count the lynchings.
